

June 16, 2025

Pin ID: 946811521664716678

<https://www.pinterest.com/pin/946811521664716678/>

Saved to: "House interior"

Status: Reinstated

What does this mean

Your Pin was mistakenly deactivated. We've since discovered this error and reactivated your Pin.

We want to reassure you that a strike was not applied to your account. We apologize for any frustration or confusion and appreciate your patience.

What policy was violated

This Pin appears to violate our Copyright policies.

What you can do

For more information, visit our Community Guidelines:

<https://policy.pinterest.com/community-guidelines> or our help center:

<https://help.pinterest.com/article/digital-services-act>.

Enforcement ID: b0bee3eb-8e4d-4d33-b511-2fdcc5254733

June 14, 2025

At Pinterest we work hard to take action against harmful and illegal content. As a result, we've deactivated the Pin you saved.

Pin ID: 946811521664716678

<https://www.pinterest.com/pin/946811521664716678/>

Saved to: "House interior"

Status: Deactivated

What does this mean

This means the Pin is not available anywhere or to anyone on Pinterest.

How was this violation identified

We allow some publishers, creators, and other copyright holders to identify and claim images that they own the rights to. Once they claim a particular image, they can tell us whether they want to allow that image to appear on Pinterest. If they choose to block the image, we will remove any matching images that our automated image-matching technology is able to identify. Your Pin was removed because our technology identified its image as matching content that a copyright owner asked to be blocked from Pinterest.

We made this decision using a hybrid method. This means a human determined that content on Pinterest violated policy, and automated systems helped expand that decision to enforce against machine-identified matching Pins like yours.

What policy was violated

This Pin appears to violate our Copyright policies.

What you can do

If you believe your Pin was disabled in error (for instance, if you contend that your use of the content was not infringing, or that the complaining party does not own the copyrights), you may submit a counter notification through your reports and violations center.

Before we can reinstate the content, we will need to forward a complete copy of your counter notification (including any personal or contact information in it) to the claimant that filed the original report. The claimant may attempt to contact you, or may file an action against you to prevent the content from being restored. For more information, please see Pinterest's Copyright Policy: <https://policy.pinterest.com/copyright>.

You can review your profile and boards and remove any other content that may go against our Community Guidelines or local law. If we discover more content that violates our terms and conditions or the law, we may take additional action on your account, such as deactivating it.

For more information, visit our Community Guidelines:

<https://policy.pinterest.com/community-guidelines> or our help center:

<https://help.pinterest.com/article/digital-services-act>.

Enforcement ID: 3763f10c-9aba-4cf0-b42d-195903009682